ACC command chief talks PME, promotions, pay

Staff Sgt. Beverly Isik
Public affairs

When Air Combat Command's Command Chief Master Sgt. Daniel Keane visited Lajes May 17-18, he brought with him information on improvements to pay and professional military education and promotions.

With a January 2002 pay raise of 4.6 percent already "set in stone," the command chief said, the president has promised an additional $1 billion to use for military pay. "How that's going to be broken out, I'm not sure," he said. "There are rumors out there about targeting some of the pay, which is good for some of the grades that are behind the private sector."

The "least painful" of the four options being considered, the chief explained, would be to spread the money out between E-1s and O-10s, which equates to about a 2.2 percent raise on top of the 4.6. The largest possible raise could give the targeted group about a 10 percent raise, when added to the 4.6, he said.

"Pay is always a concern as far as retention goes, but honestly," the 27-year veteran said, "if you want to be a millionaire, you need to get out of the United States Air Force. You're not going to be a millionaire. But, if you want to have a good time and do something that's bigger than all of us put together -- if you want to be part of an Olympic team that takes care of other people and takes care of our country, you may want to think about staying in."

Keane, a former aircraft weapons specialist, also shared news about upcoming improvements to enlisted PME.

"I had the opportunity a couple of months ago to sit in a top to bottom review of our professional military education -- the first one in 10 years," the chief said.

During the review, the command chiefs, the chief master sergeant of the Air Force, experts from the College of Professional Military Education and several commandants looked at the PME vision and asked, "Where do we want PME injected into the system and do we have enough PME?"

"The consensus is we need more PME," Keane said.

Additional PME, expected to be implemented by 2005, includes providing web-based modules followed by a professional development seminar between the time airmen receive their 5-level and the time they attend airman leadership school; and an NCO professional development course as a web-based module, followed by a two-day seminar.

"Moving on up the line, we're trying to put some teeth in the program," the chief said. "In the future, we're going to make PME mandatory. PME creates better supervisors, and we want to give people the opportunity to go to PME."

With promotion rates on the rise, the chief encouraged everyone to "hit the books."

This year, he said the expected promotion rates for staff sergeant should be more than 50 percent; with an estimated 33 percent to

What if the clinic is closed?

Question: I'm frustrated by the amount of time the clinic is closed, due to training and base functions. At a minimum, would it be possible to have a taped message on the central appointments line explaining clinic closures affecting patient access and our alternatives?

Answer: Thanks for bringing your concern to my attention. The 65th Medical Group is proud of maintaining one of the best patient access to care rates in Air Combat Command, and they take patients' concerns very seriously. The clinic runs an extended morning sick call from 7:30-8:30 a.m. on all down days, such as Safety Day or the monthly training day, which is held the second Wednesday of each month. Lately, however, they have not adequately advertised clinic closures and regret any inconvenience this has caused.

In the future, the clinic will advertise such closures at least one week in advance in both the Crossroads and on Blue Notes, post flyers in public access buildings such as the post office, and implement your suggestion to add a taped message to the central appointments line informing callers of the change. They will continue to post signs at the clinic entrances informing people of the closure and of primary care managers' contact numbers.

You can call 2-3261 to book or cancel appointments. If you need to contact a provider after hours, call 96-647-8370.

Keck sends message

Lieutenant General Thomas J. Keck
8th Air Force commander

Memorial Day is a unique national holiday. It is a day of personal sorrow and remembrance for those who have lost loved ones in uniform. It is a day for the nation to mourn, to show our collective national pride and to demonstrate our deep appreciation to those who made the ultimate sacrifice. But it is also a day of celebration...to honor the soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen who died fighting for the incomparable freedoms America enjoys today.

Memorial Day is a tribute to the patriots who fought and died to build and protect the United States of America and all the ideals our great nation represents. We honor these brave warriors by not forgetting them or taking for granted their part in the fight for freedom and democracy.

America was founded on the principles of freedom and independence. Members of the "Mighty Eighth" Air Force have proudly contributed to these principles. It is difficult to believe that 10 years have passed since our coalition success in the Persian Gulf War. Since then, American forces have faced enemy fire in Somalia, Bosnia and Kosovo. And our forces face dangers every day... whether on realistic training missions, patrolling hot border areas or assisting with humanitarian relief across the globe.

Our Armed Forces stand guard in a world that continues to pose significant threats to our country and our allies. As we enter the 21st century, we are venturing into an uncertain future. Threats to the welfare of this great nation have new dimensions and emerge from previously unseen sources.

AWOL Rock: Fact or fiction?

What's the real story behind AWOL Rock? How far is it from the island?

Answer: The rock, which is commonly known to the Americans stationed here as "AWOL" rock, is located just off the coast behind Beira Mar housing.

Its real name is "Ilheu do Norte" or islet of the North.

Rumor has it that if you wanted to go AWOL back to the States, you'd have to go toward the rock.

But, it's just a lava rock that was probably formed when the island emerged or at a later date during a volcanic eruption.

The rock is about 3,776 feet from Terceira, 3.8 square miles in area and is about 62 feet tall. The average depth between Terceira and the islet is 75-98 feet.

Although just a lava rock, it can offer a spectacular view, especially when the ocean is really rough and one can see the white waves jumping high over it.

Team Lajes to join America in moment of remembrance

To commemorate Memorial Day, Monday, White House officials have asked all Americans to share a "National Moment of Remembrance" at 3 p.m. by pausing to remember those who have sacrificed for freedom.

At Lajes, Detachment 6, Air Force News, will interrupt regular programming for one minute at 3 p.m. to give everyone the opportunity to remember.

"I encourage everyone who will be at home Monday to join me in paying respects to those who made the ultimate sacrifice for our country," said Col. Bill Percival, 65th Air Base Wing commander.

Critical days start Monday

Maj. Lyle Decker
Safety office

Ah, those lazy, hazy days of summer. It's a time when a young person's fancy turns to thoughts of water skiing, scuba diving, hiking, camping and generally making the most of the warm weather and long days full of sunshine.

It's also a time when people get the urge to hit the open roads and travel to places only read about in magazines and sales brochures. Unfortunately, these idyllic scenes all too often turn into scenes of tragedy.

Monday, Memorial Day, through Labor Day are the 101 Critical Days of Summer. During this time, many of us spend more time participating in outdoor activities with family and friends than during the rest of the year.

This increased outdoor activity results in a corresponding rise in safety mishaps. Most of these mishaps occur on highways and waterways, where people are enjoying some much deserved leisure time.

People are always tempted to pack as much fun and adventure into one day as possible -- sometimes too much.

Last year, Air Combat Command lost six people in 4-wheel private motor vehicle accidents during the 101 Critical Days of Summer.

I urge all Team Lajes members as they embark on summertime activities — whether it's a family vacation or simply time outdoors — to use common sense and practice basic safety procedures. Drive defensively, wear seat belts and always arrange for a designated driver when your social activities involve alcohol.

This summer the Crossroads newspaper will publish some safety tips to help people perform Personal Risk Management for many of the most popular summertime activities.

Looking at these safety tips and applying them to activities will go a long way toward ensuring everyone gets the most out of their lazy, hazy days of summer, and ensuring they'll be around when it begins to look a lot like Christmas.

Base honors enlisted heritage during ball

Nearly 200 enlisted Team Lajes members turned out for the Fifth Annual Enlisted Heritage Ball Friday. During his speech, Air Combat Command's Command Chief Master Sgt. Daniel Keane emphasized the important role enlisted people play in enabling expeditionary airpower and the impact they have on people's lives.

technical sergeant, and 39 percent to master.

"Our promotion rates have skyrocketed, and I expect the rates to stay high for a couple of years, so people need to study. The future is real bright."

The Air Force will release the technical and master sergeant promotions list June 7.

Retention rates are also looking better, according to the chief. The Air Force slightly exceeded its first-term airmen retention goals this year, while second-term and career airmen enlistment goals are slightly less than they should be with 75 and 95 percent respectively, he said.

The chief, a native of the Bronx in New York City, offered the following challenge to people considering leaving the Air Force.

"Before you decide to get out of the Air Force, go home on leave and see what your buddies are doing. Go see what your high school classmates are doing and then come back to your base and make a decision," he said. "I think you'll be surprised."

Speaking of Lajes, specifically, the chief attributes the overall attitude and success here to motivation through "great leadership, great NCOs and great airmen."

"I see a lot of highly qualified leaders out there, with high spirits and a lot of energy, doing great things," he said. "There are a lot of really fired-up folks looking to make things better, and I see things being made better all over this base. I love the attitudes I hear at Lajes."

Increasingly, we are challenged by regional instability, transnational dangers, and cyber terrorism.

The members of the Mighty Eighth are fully prepared to meet the challenges of this new century. The continued vigilance we maintain is an important way of honoring those we remember today. We learn from history—from our mistakes and from our victories—because we never want to lose the precious freedoms preserved with the blood of those who came before us.

I urge you to pause, reflect and celebrate on this Memorial Day. It is the remembrance of loss and the honoring of sacrifice that make this a most unique American holiday.

Program brings more re-enlistment choices

WASHINGTON (AFPN) — Airmen will soon have a new way to re-enlist, offering more control over separations and retirements and possibly bringing more money to those eligible for bonuses.

Upon implementation of the Air Force's Military Personnel Data System Modernization program, tentatively set for the beginning of June, airmen re-enlisting will fall under the Full Enlistment Program.

Full enlistment will allow airmen to specify the number of years and months they wish to re-enlist. They must re-enlist for a minimum of four years and a maximum of six.

This program allows re-enlistment to high-year-tenure, using a combination of yearly and monthly increments. Senior airmen may not exceed their high-year-of-tenure, and those eligible to retire may not exceed their HYT plus one month.

Another major change from the current system is that airmen are required to fulfill their entire re-enlistment contract, said Master Sgt. Mai Pederson, chief of enlisted skills management.

For example, if more than 29 days remain until an airman's date of separation, the period will be counted as one month. If 29 days or less remain, the days will not be added to the new contract.

If an airman's date of separation is July 15, and the airman decides to re-enlist May 1 for four years, the remaining obligated service is two months and 15 days. The new period of re-enlistment will be four years and two months because the remaining 15 days are less than 29 days and aren't included.

If this airman was eligible for a Selective Re-enlistment Bonus and re-enlisted for four years and two months, the new SRB would be paid for four years because the airman was already paid for the two months in the old re-enlistment. The two months of obligated service wouldn't be recouped; it would be served in the new contract.

Airmen may re-enlist under the current system until MILMOD implementation, then they must use the new program.

The re-enlistment window has also been expanded from three months before the estimated time-in-service date to 12 months. This was changed to allow second term and career airmen more flexibility on re-enlistment dates.

For more information call the military personnel flight at 2-2155.

Everyday Hero

Army Sgt. 1st Class Melinda Deaton, NCO in charge of the veterinary clinic, and Sasha, a 6-month-old German Shepherd, share a quiet moment. Sasha's owners, David and Judy Clark, credit Deaton with saving Sasha's life earlier this month. They said Sasha means treasure, and people like Deaton "who really put their hearts into their jobs are the greatest treasures of all." Col. Bill Percival, 65th Air Base Wing commander, said it's easy to see the impact of Deaton's kindness and professionalism and that he's grateful to have her on Lajes' team.
